concluded to take a trip through the states, and as I had been indisposed for some time back, with a loss of appetite, no sleep, &c., I made this my excuse, & I travelled for my health." When I made this declaration, there was nothing like travelling for health, every body recommended it. So I started with the intention of being absent a year or more. Travelling I most say, agreed with me completely, for at the first stopping place, I made as hearty a meal as any of my fellow passengers; and when I stopped for the night, I slept as sound as a roach. To tell the truth, I feigned sickness only for an excuse to get away from home. The real motive for my departure, was, my feelings towards Martin began to change. I

SENATE.

IN SENATE.—Mr. Allen, Senator from Ohio, appeared in day and took his seat.

A message was received from the House of Representatives, through Mr. Franklin, their Clerk, announcing to the Senate that a copy of the House had been received, and that a committee had been appointed to wait on the President of the United States, and had applied a committee on their part.

Mr. Wright from the joint Committee appointed to inform the President of the United States that a quorum of the two Houses were assembled, and ready to proceed to business, reported that the committee had performed the duty assigned them, and that the President had expressed to them his intention to communicate to the two Houses, in writing, this day at 12 o'clock.

A message was accordingly received from the President of the United States by Mr. Van Buren, his private secretary, and was read by the Secretary, the reading occupying about an hour and a half.

Mr. Wright moved the printing of 10,000 copies of the Message and of the accompanying documents.

Mr. Clay, of Kentucky, said he rose to second the motion of the Senator from New York (Mr. Wright) to print an extra number of copies of the Message. He should indeed have no objection to publishing double of triple the number proposed, if it was considered to distribute them. He had recommended the same purpose for which he had risen, but while he was up he would not forbear saying that, after attentively listening to the reading of this Message, he felt the deepest regret that the President, entertaining such views, and proposing such a plan for the relief of the Country, as he had presented, had deemed it his duty to call an Extra Session of Congress at this important crisis of the year.

Mr. Buchanan said he did not rise to express any opinion or to enter into any discussion. "But," he said, "it is the will of the people that it be printed from five thousand to ten thousand copies, and he thought the former number too small for the purpose of it to satisfy the demand of his constituents."

Mr. Wright accepted the proposition, and the decision of his original motion, and the Message and accompanying documents were ordered to be printed.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

The following members elect appeared, were qualified, and took their seats, viz:

From South Carolina.—Mr. Richardson.

From Georgia.—Mr. Cleveland, Mr. Glazebrook, and Mr. Dawson.

From Louisiana.—Mr. Garland.

And the following Delegates from Territories appeared, viz: From Florida, Mr. Downing; from Wisconsin, Mr. Jones.

Mr. Garland, of Va., from the Joint Committee appointed to wait on the President of the United States, reported that they had performed the duty assigned them, and the President had informed them he would make a communication to both Houses of Congress this day at 12 o'clock.

Abraham Van Buren, Private Secretary of the President, then came in and presented the Message, which was read at the Clerk's table.

Mr. Hays moved that the Message be printed in the whole, and that 10,000 copies be printed for the use of the members.

Mr. Green, of Ohio, moved to amend the motion by substituting 50,000.

Mr. Richardson inquired whether any person was authorized to execute this order should it pass?

Mr. Hays said he was not prepared to say that there was.

Mr. Green moved the substituted number of 50,000 as a modification of his motion.

Mr. Williams moved the motion be 10,000.

In supporting this motion, Mr. W. observed that he had been much gratified in hearing his colleagues from the original motion to 10,000 copies. He had called it an amendment that the House would communicate to the Senate a billable report to the unembarrassed state of the country, and with a firm resolution to expend no more of the public money than the public service absolutely requires. It was a fact known to all that previous to the year 1855, no more than 5000 copies of any public documents were printed; in that year the number was doubled; then the number was increased to 10,000; for the last two or three years it had risen to 20,000.

Mr. W. would appeal to the experience of all who heard him, whether it were not a fact that the Message was always published and circulated over the whole Union, for months, before the copies from the public printer were obtained. At length had been urged to keep down the expenditures of the Government, and they had been considered and represented by many as invidious, because they were said to be levied either at the President or at the public printer. The last decision could not apply at least to the present motion; for as there was at present no public printer appointed, it could not be claimed as such an officer. Mr. W. was now, and always had been, willing to vote all necessary appropriations to the very fullest extent; but why should the House order 20,000 copies of this document? There would not have been a copy of it, and it would have been read by the whole population of the United States in the midst of the existing public embarrassments there would be some effort made to curtail the national expenditures. For himself, he was prepared, so far as his vote would go, to carry out the principles he had now urged to the end. He hoped the House would suffer a division, that it might be seen who were and who were not willing to throw away the public money.

The motion to lay the Message on the table having been agreed to, the question was first put on the highest number moved, viz. 20,000 copies.

On this motion, Mr. Bond demanded the yeas and nays, and they were ordered; and being taken, stood as follows: Yeas, 115; nays, 109.

So the motion for 20,000 copies was carried.

The Speaker laid before the House a report from the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. Conner moved that 20,000 copies of the report be printed; another member moved 10,000.

The question being put on printing 20,000, it was negatived—Yeas, 101; nays, 106.

The next resolution to supply the members with newspapers was moved by Mr. McKean, and agreed to.

PRINTER TO THE HOUSE.

On motion of Mr. Patton, of Virginia, the House proceeded to ballot for a Printer to the House.

Mr. Williams, of South Carolina, nominated John S. Boston.

Mr. Hays nominated John S. Boston.

Mr. Clark, of N. Y., nominated Thomas Allen.

There were five additional ballots, which resulted as follows:
